HELVERSON FUNERAL RECORDS

BURIALS
October 18 1846 to July 15 1849

VOLUME 3
Most of the early records omit the given name, listing the deceased only as Mr. Smith, or child of Mr. Smith etc. Usually the address is given, however the present street numbering system did not begin in Philadelphia until 1857. The address was given as near an intersection or next to a certain business establishment. Children were said to be either "child of" or "for child"; the GSP indexers have taken this into account and note the distinction. The assumption being "child of" is the natural child of the person paying for the funeral, and "for child" is most likely someone other than the child's parent as being responsible for payment. In fact, it was quite common to find someone else paying for a funeral; a friend, the doctor, an employer etc. Frequently a cemetery is named and the researcher should check cemetery records, newspaper death notices, and The City of Philadelphia Board of Health Cemetery Returns, 1803-1860. The early Returns were to control the spread of disease and until 1818 covered only the original city, and the Districts of Southwark and Northern Liberties. In 1818 Penn Township was added and in 1848/49 Kensington, Richmond, Spring Garden and West Philadelphia came under the Board's jurisdiction. After the City-County Consolidation Act of 1854, the Board's authority extended to the City and County of Philadelphia as it is known today. These records are not complete; the original records are at the Archives of the City and County of Philadelphia and the WPA Index (a typed alphabetical list giving name, age, cause of death, physician and burial place) are on microfilm at the HSP and in bound volumes at the Free Library of Philadelphia's Central Library, Logan Square.
