Message from the President

I hear the bagpipers coming. I feel the rhythm of the Irish step dancers. The air is heavy with the aroma of porridge and shortbread, of bangers and colcannon. Guinness and Irn-Bru complement the food. St. Patrick, green, the language, and the music all serve to further define the Irish and the Scots-Irish people and make them so unique.

They were and are a proud people who cherish their rich heritage. I think it must have been very difficult to leave their homeland and come to America but, at the same time, I am so pleased they did. Through records, family stories and my DNA results, I know I share the treasures of mind and body they carried with them. My ancestors dreamed of a new life for themselves and, ultimately, for descendants like me.

There is so much more to learn about them. I find myself excited each year at this time when Fintan Mullan and Gillian Hunt of The Ulster Historical Foundation spend a day, sponsored by GSP, discussing various records available in Ireland and online that will help my research. New lecture content each year adds continuously to my knowledge of resources, and there is availability at this Ulster event for the opportunity to connect with other researchers, find books about Irish and Scots-Irish research and so much more.

Perhaps, at this all-day March 15th Ulster event, you and I will determine we share common ancestors!

RELATIVES AROUND ME

The purpose of using the Relatives Around Me tool in the FamilySearch Family Tree app is to determine whether you and any other nearby app users share a common ancestor. Attendees will be encouraged to have the app open during lunch to seek matches. A Help Table will be available during registration to answer questions about this software scan.

Here are the basic steps for using this tool:

Before March 15:

Create a FREE FamilySearch account on https://www.familysearch.org/.
Create a Family Tree on FamilySearch.org. Any size tree will do, but the larger the tree, the more likely you are to find matches.
Download the FREE FamilySearch Family Tree app.

At the conference:

Make sure “Location” is turned on your mobile device, and you have an internet connection.
Open app with your account User ID/Password from FamilySearch.org.
Once Family Tree App opens, select “More” for IOS or the menu (3 bars) for Android.
Select “Relatives Around Me”
Screen will say “Scan for Friends”
Tap “Scan for Friends” to have your device find anyone who shares an ancestor with you who also has the app, a family tree on FamilySearch, and is within 100 feet of you.

For further directions, see https://www.familysearch.org/blog/en/family-tree-app-cool-features/

SURNAME EXCHANGE

A corkboard and index cards will be available in the lobby for anyone who wants to post their desire to find others with similar research interests. A brief description of a person or family for whom one is seeking information can be placed on an index card along with contact information and tack it to the corkboard for others to check and, if needed, copy during the day. If you also indicate willingness for your query to be published in our newsletter, it will be in issues over the coming months.
IRISH and SCOTS-IRISH WALL of HONOR

With deepest gratitude, we, your descendants, thank you for your courage in coming to a new and strangely different world and thereby building a new life for yourself and us as well. At this very special time of year, we remember and honor you through this listing.

Ancestor Spotlight: Ellen McBride

The story of Ellen (McBride) McBride presents an example of an Irish immigrant ancestor from a family that is a challenge to research because of the lack of Irish records and a family in which many people have similar names and married people with the same surnames.

Ellen McBride was born in August 1860, the daughter of Michael and Mary McBride of Cranford, Donegal. She had at least one brother, John and one sister, Bridget. John married Susan Lynagh and Bridget married James McGarvey.

Several members of the family emigrated over the next 30 years. Ellen sailed to New York on the SS California and then traveled to Philadelphia. In 1885, she married Michael McBride. They lived at 2606 Salmon Street, in the Port Richmond neighborhood.

Their neighbors at 2608 Salmon Street, Michael McBride and his wife Winifred/Unity (McBride) McBride, were also relatives. The family is a bit challenging to research because so many people have the same names and married other McBrides. Winifred/Unity was known as “Aunt Uni” and appears variously as either Winifred or Unity.

Michael and Winifred/Unity McBride’s children were known to be the first cousins of Michael and Ellen’s children. A John McBride of the right age to be Ellen’s brother John is listed in the 1900 census with Michael as his brother. Winifred/Unity’s sister Anna McBride Reynolds was also a known relative. Both have parents listed as Patrick McBride and Catherine Wilhare on their death certificates. It is possible that this Michael was Ellen’s brother and that Winifred/Unity and Anna were siblings of Ellen’s husband Michael. Unfortunately, the relationships cannot be determined with certainty as both Michaels died before parents’ names were listed on death certificates in Pennsylvania, both were born before civil registration and church records, and neither marriage record lists parents’ names.

Another known branch of the family is that of James McBride, born in Cranford in 1885 to Patrick and Margery (McBride) McBride. Family said that he was a first cousin to Ellen and Michael’s children and that he was also related to Michael and Winifred/Unity McBride’s family. Again, lack of records prevents determining relationships with certainty, so we must rely on other evidence. The Irish marriage record of James’ parents Patrick and Margery states that their fathers were both named Patrick McBride, which rules out either of his parents being a sibling of Ellen, whose father’s name was Michael. It is also not likely that his father was a brother of Ellen’s husband Michael, as Michael’s brother Patrick who died in 1894 was single. The only remaining possibility seems to be that James’ mother Margery was a sister of Ellen’s husband Michael.

Over the next 10 years, Michael and Ellen had six children, but sadly saw much tragedy. Their first child, Michael, born in 1886, died when he was a “few minutes” old. Patrick, born March 10, 1892 died when he was 19 days old. Michael’s brother Patrick passed away in 1894. Three years later, Michael died of cirrhosis of the liver at age 37. Ellen wore long black dresses, customary for widows during this era, for the rest of her life.
Opportunities for women were few at the time and Ellen had four small children: Edward (age 9), Mary (age 8), Hugh (age 3), and Bridget (age 2). By then the family was living in a larger house at 2565 Salmon Street and Ellen began taking in boarders, a common way for people (but particularly widows and other women) to generate income. Living with the family in 1900 were Patrick O’Donnell, John McBride, Hugh Harkins, and James McFadden. All are common names in Donegal. Son Edward was employed as a glass worker at age 12, helping to support the family.

Two years after Michael’s death, tragedy struck the family again when Mary, age 10, died. Ellen and Michael’s three children who survived to adulthood were Edward (born 1888), Hugh (born 1894), and Bridget (born 1895), who later changed her name to Catherine B.

Edward barely survived to adulthood, dying at age 22 in 1910. The family story was that he was dressed up to go out and was assaulted by a group of boys and knocked under the water of a fire hydrant, but the official cause of death was aortic regurgitation and mitral regurgitation. His death greatly affected Ellen and the family, as might be expected.

Ellen’s grandson William Lutz later noted that she used to “sign for immigrants to come over from Ireland.” There are several instances of passenger lists with people who list a Mrs. McBride at her address as their contact.

By 1915, Ellen and her daughter Catherine had saved enough money to purchase a house at 2908 Cedar Street. Catherine married Albert Lutz, eight years her junior, in 1927. Ellen lived with Catherine and Albert and their children Catherine and William for the rest of her life.

William Lutz remembered his grandmother teaching him to read by reading the Public Record newspaper with him. In later years, he noted that he was taught to read by a woman born in Ireland before the American Civil War. He also recalled that she could speak Irish as well as English.

Ellen died in 1939 at the age of 79 and was buried at New Cathedral Cemetery in Philadelphia. In her will, she left her house and her possessions to her “beloved daughter Catherine.”

How Many Generations Will the Glow Last?

Over the last few hundred years, many, many immigrants have come to America from numerous countries. Ireland, Scotland, and the Scots-Irish area in Northern Ireland have certainly been well represented. My Murphy family, according to evidence found thus far, came to Philadelphia in 1816 on the ship Ceres from County Wexford, Ireland. John and Johanna appear to have been the parents of the others including Francis Murphy, my ancestor. Members of this family are found by 1830 in Falls Township, Bucks County, some remaining there and others moving around 1850 across the Delaware River to Trenton, NJ. They had already begun to appear in records of St John’s (Catholic) Church in Trenton in the early 1830s. Many Catholic Bucks County residents traveled across the river to that church for religious events like marriages and christenings. Francis and his wife Bridgit Conlin had their children christened in that church. They and their children were among those who moved to Trenton to live around 1850.

Francis and Bridgit (Conlin) Murphy had a son William who, in turn, had his own son William F. Murphy. The latter, with wife Gertrude Farrell Glenn, had a daughter Laura E. Murphy, my maternal grandmother. I was always told that Laura aka “Nan” often prepared colcannon for dinner. Colcannon, made with mashed potatoes and cabbage was a traditional Irish food. So, it seems, it survived as a favorite in my Murphy family through several generations (John, Francis, William, William F., Laura).

Alas, they say, all good things must come to an end and that was true of colcannon for this Murphy family. Laura’s children with husband Newell Earlin, begged their mother Laura to make their new favorite food – spaghetti and meatballs! Apparently, Laura did her best but, according to the family story, ended up cooking enough spaghetti to feed an army and needed help with the sauce and meatball preparation. She learned from that experience and from trying recipes supplied to her by Italian friends and neighbors for meatballs and spaghetti sauce. Her children loved it. I did, as well, since my mother used that final chosen recipe to make my favorite dinner – spaghetti and meatballs! I own the recipe and this story. From time to time I make the meatballs and sauce and, while doing so, think of my Irish ancestors!
