MESSAGE FROM GSP'S PRESIDENT

As we begin a busy holiday season, please join us in welcoming our newest GSP board member, Deborah Hoskins, who joins us following a four-year term as treasurer of the National Genealogical Society (page 2).

Deborah will fill the unexpired term of board member Joseph Roby, who resigned in August after two years on the board, during which he worked with GSP's newsletter and program committees and served as interim programs chair. We thank Joseph for his work with GSP and wish him well with his future endeavors.

Read more about new GSP member benefits to help with your family history research during the holidays, including access to Pennsylvania newspapers on NewspaperArchive and a discount on Goldie May software for organizing your research (page 3).

We have several events on the schedule for December, including "Researching at the Free Library of Philadelphia" with Marija Gudauskas on December 1, the GSP fall conference "Germans! Germans! Germans!" (featuring GSP's own Jim Beidler) on December 10, and our Third Thursday program "What's New at FamilySearch and the Family History Library" with David Rencher of FamilySearch on December 15 (pages 3, 4, 6, and 13).

During pre- and post-holiday cleaning, think twice before throwing away old greeting cards. Check the cards and envelopes for useful information, including addresses, family relationships, and news of family events. Nancy Nelson provides an example of a greeting card that included the only known record of a family marriage (page 5).

If your research includes land records, be sure to watch Kimberly Powell's two-part program "Where Did Your Ancestor Live? Researching and Platting Land in Pennsylvania," available free to GSP members (page 7). And if you missed "How to Navigate the Pennsylvania State Archives' Online Resources," follow the link on page 7 to view it now.

If you have roots in Lebanon County, see our County Spotlight with information about Lebanon County and where to find records (page 8).

FamilySearch has records from throughout the U.S. and the world, all freely searchable with a FamilySearch account, with most freely viewable as well. If you haven't used this amazing resource or need a refresher, learn more on page 9. If you live in Pennsylvania but are not close enough to GSP to use our FamilySearch Affiliate Library, check the list of FamilySearch Affiliate Libraries in Pennsylvania by zip code on pages 9 and 10 for locations near you.

Learn more about GSP's newest public resource, the African American Family History Resource page (page 11) and Diahn Southard's new PBS program Your DNA Secrets Revealed (page 12). And check out the latest books available for sale on page 14. These are always popular, so get them while you can!

Thanks so much to all of you for your support of GSP through membership, donations, volunteering, attending programs, and letting your friends and family know about GSP.

We wish all of you a happy and healthy holiday season!

Valerie-Anne Lutz, Board President

GSP WELCOMES NEW BOARD MEMBER DEBORAH HOSKINS

Deborah Lebo Hoskins wrote her first family history in the fifth grade as a requirement for her social studies class. Her interest in genealogy was sparked when she cleaned out her mother's attic in 2009 and found many original genealogical documents. She is her family's historian, and her current focus is on a surname study of her mother's maternal line beginning in the mid-1700s.

She has attended many NGS annual conferences, classes at GRIP, IGHR, and SLIG, and has taken part in the Mastering Genealogical Proof and Mastering Genealogical Documentation online classes and an NGSQ study group. A 2015 graduate of the NGS Home Study Course, Hoskins completed the Boston University Certificate in Genealogical Research Program in May 2016 and the APG ProGen Study Group in November 2017.

Hoskins was the Treasurer for the National Genealogical Society from 2018-2022. She retired as vice president of finance for Hunterdon Healthcare System in Flemington, NJ in July 2018. She is a Fellow in the American College of Healthcare Executives and the Healthcare Financial Management Association. She received a BS in accounting from Elizabethtown College Pennsylvania and a master's degree in public administration from Penn State University and currently holds a New Jersey and Pennsylvania CPA license. She and her husband currently reside in Pennsylvania but have become "snowbirds," wintering in Florida.

GSP 2022 FALL SEMINAR

Saturday, December 10, 2022
9:00 am – 12:30 pm, EST

James M. Beidler, presents
Germans, Germans, Germans!

Registration

Top Methodologies, Record Groups for Germans

What are the top methodologies for researching German ancestors? What are the most helpful types of records and documents and where do you find them on- and off-line? This presentation provides beginners with the answers and seasoned researchers with a way of double-checking their work!

De-Garbling Places and Surnames with Phonetics

One of the greatest challenges of German genealogy is dealing with spelling variants of surnames and place names. Learn about the tools for dealing with these variants to find the most authentic versions of surnames and find previously unfindable places.

German Church Records, On- and Off-line

No genealogist with German-speaking ancestors avoids using church records, and the good news is that many more of them are coming online in digital form. It's important, however, to know whether you're looking at originals, duplicates, or extracts from these records – this presentation will explain the differences.

Goldie May

Do you need help in organizing your research? You're not alone! In a recent GSP special presentation "The Why and How of Keeping a Research Log," we learned more about Goldie May, which helps researchers to organize their materials.

If you missed the program, you can learn more about it and watch a three-minute demo on the Goldie May website, where you can also download a free version of Goldie May.

Newspaper Archive

Newspapers can provide the "missing link" to fill in gaps in our family histories. One of the major subscription sites for accessing newspapers is NewspaperArchive.com. GSP members now have free access to all Pennsylvania newspapers on NewspaperArchive.

Visit the NewspaperArchive Pennsylvania Collection while logged into the GSP website as a GSP member. You'll be taken directly to the page - no need for an additional login. All newspapers are fully searchable.

FIRST FAMILIES CORNER

Using old greeting cards for family research

Most of us have a box of old greeting cards that were just too pretty to throw away, or that contained useful handwritten information. I found a box of 50th anniversary cards when we were cleaning out my grandparents' house; they were married for over 65 years. Usually we save – for a while, at least – graduation cards, wedding cards, and even special birthday cards. My great-Aunt Linie died early in December the year I turned four. She had already addressed Christmas cards for us children, and my mother saved mine. I still have it.

In the days before Facebook, email, and unlimited calling and texting, there were distant relatives who only communicated at Christmas time.

A Christmas card might include news of a new baby, a wedding in the family, or a new address. It might even mention the death of a relative. This is news that we get instantly now, over our morning coffee, but earlier generations might finally be getting information that was months old.

I have a friend who has never found the official record of her parents' marriage. Her mother was a nurse working in a Washington DC hospital; her father was an army officer. The marriage could have taken place in Washington, or in any of several nearby states. The only proof that she has is a Christmas card that the newly married couple mailed to a relative, stating their marriage date. She treasures the card and its envelope with the postmarked date. Even now in the 21st century, some family records are only available "the old-fashioned way."

Where Did Your Ancestor Live? Researching and Platting Land in Pennsylvania Online Zoom event with Kimberly Powell

Land records are an often-overlooked source for unlocking answers to many of our family history questions. Part One of this two-part series offers an introduction to finding and using Pennsylvania deed records, including the types of deeds you may encounter and how to interpret them, where to find deed records online in Pennsylvania, how to navigate some of the trickier indexing systems used in various PA counties, and tips for tracking land in and out of your ancestor's possession. Part Two digs into the fun of land platting—how to read a legal land description, how to turn that into a plat, and some short case studies of how land platting can help to answer genealogical research questions.

Part one will be online until Dec. 19, 2022.

Part two will be online until Jan. 16, 2023.

DNA CORNER

New Genealogy Program Premiering on PBS!

Your DNA Secrets Revealed, hosted by Diahn Southard is premiering on PBS stations across the United States beginning November 26, 2022.

According to Diahn, the show “communicates all the things we value in family history and DNA testing. It showcases a wide range of experiences and helps us see the transformation that learning about your family can bring... (it) doesn’t focus just on the moment of discovery, but catches up with these families later, too, to see how this information has impacted them long-term.”

Research in Pennsylvania, 2nd Edition, is an essential guidebook for family historians who can trace their roots back to early Pennsylvanian immigrants, including African Americans, Dutch, Finns, Germans, Scots Irish, Swedes, and Welsh as well as later immigrants from Asian and Slovak countries.

After a concise review of the state's history and settlement, the author delves into the types of genealogical resources that can be found both in major and lesser-known archives, libraries, societies, and federal repositories. Research in Pennsylvania also covers other research categories, including atlases, gazetteers, and maps; business, probate, and court records; colonial enumerations and state and federal censuses; city and county directories; ethnic, religious, and military records; and much more.

The US Census has been the standard source of family information gathered by the US Government. The methods of collecting this information remained unchanged from 1790 until the late 20th century. What did change from census to census were the boundaries of the assigned areas for census takers. Until 1870, the Census Bureau utilized existing political boundaries. Starting in 1880, it redrew the map so that special, nonpolitical divisions known as enumeration districts were laid out for the census taker. No enumeration district crosses any county or state boundary. Each decennial census from 1880 to 2000 has its own individual set of enumeration districts. This work will greatly ease the burden of the family historian or genealogist in locating the proper enumeration district in Philadelphia.
